

Degraded Area Recovery Plan (PRAD)

The Degraded Area Recovery Plan (PRAD) is necessary in situations that require the recovery of sites and ecosystems affected by works, commercial operations or productive activities.

The recovery of the area takes place through the definition of a plan that considers the environmental, economic and social aspects, according to the future destination that is intended to be given to the area, aiming at its ecological balance.

For the recovery of the areas, tried and tested methodologies and techniques are proposed, and should aim at the recovery of the area as a whole, this may include, for example, the soil, vegetation, water resource and/or fauna re-establishment.
